

EVERYDAY EVANGELISM

It's always good to find a ten-cent definition to a fifty-cent word. I found one a few minutes ago in a letter from a missionary.

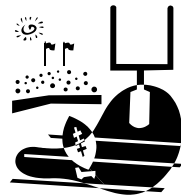

"Missional" is a word that has gotten a lot of press in church related publications over the past few years. Missional—you can look at it and kinda-sorta know what it is about. I mean, I know a little about missions, and even a little about mission, as in "mission-statement," etc... But exactly what is it?

Maybe this isn't it, but it is good. A "missional lifestyle," this missionary said, is to "get outside the church walls and be salt and light in your community for the glory of God." OK, like I said, I'm not sure exactly what missional is, but I sure like the idea of getting outside church walls and . . .

Just before I sat down to type this note, I took on the mission of being missional. There is a friend I've been talking to about the Lord—off and on in a friendly sort of way. I stopped by to keep the conversation going. Even if you aren't sure exactly what it means, go be missional to the glory of God.

WOL UPCOMING EVENTS

- February 5, 2012: Superbowl Party at Kim and Debbie's House, 6pm-the end of the game. Junior High teens bring a snack and Senior High teens bring a drink. Talk to a Word Of Life Leader for more information.

The minutes from the last business meeting are available in the rack in the Activity Center. Be watching the bulletin for the date of the next Business Meeting.
